Summary

T'Ana meets a beautiful Catian

T'ana and Shax had an agreement from the start. No matter how wild and uninhibited Shax tried to be, he could never match a Catian in heat.

T'ana was lucky, to cross paths with an attractive Catian while she was on shore leave.

Or maybe unlucky. Her game was weak and she had no idea how to approach the situation. The Catian on the other side of the bar was a beauty to be sure: grey fur and bright green eyes.

T'Ana took the seat next to her.

“So..you come here often?”

“Well, yeah, you’re right.” T’Ana was bold enough to take the other Catian’s hand. The grey Catian’s eyes opened wide. “Perfect place for a bit of fun”

T’Ana placed a gentle hand on the grey Catian’s thigh, but the grey Catian flattened her ears and hissed.

“Woah, damn...sorry.” T’Ana held her paws up in surrender. “Guess I misread something, in a big way...better get my ass back to the Cerritos.”

The grey Catian grabbed T’Ana by the paw. “Your attention isn’t unwelcome, it’s just that you moved too fast.”

“Well, if we’re passing through starbases, fast is all we can be.” T’Ana purred.

The Grey Catian flicked an ear. “We’ll keep in touch. Our paths may cross again.”
