Debriefing

Summary

Leeta and Ezri attend to a very delicate matter

"Captain Smiley wants me to debrief you." Leeta teased as she grinned and leaned toward Ezri.
"Must be my lucky day." Ezri matched Leeta's playful tone and coy smile.

The pair gave one more cautious look at the trio of Ferengi before they turned to go and find a place to conduct their delicate, private business. Once they were alone in a dark corridor, Leeta took Ezra's hand.

"I can't believe that Ferengi said you're married." Ezri wrinkled her nose. "That other universe sounds terrible."

"Ugh, don't ruin the moment. I was trying to forget about that. In here." Leeta went to a wall panel and with her free hand entered a code. The door slid open, and Leeta pulled Ezri inside. The door closed behind them, and Leeta chose to leave the lights dim.

"Let me guess," Ezri teased. "This has nothing to do with Smiley, right?"

"Clever girl. How'd you figure that out?" Leeta pulled Ezri closer and began to kiss her. Leeta took control and inched forward until Ezri's back pressed against the wall. She pulled away for just a moment to bring her hands to Ezri's shoulders and pin her to the wall. "Do you like it rough like this?"

"I do," Ezri purred. "But most of the other hosts would rather take charge. I might turn the tables if one of them comes to the surface."

"Don't threaten me with a good time."
